Sam Jones's Blasphemy

The following editorial utterance of the New York Sun under the heading "Blasphemy" covers Sam Jones's character admirably:

"The reporters of the Sun have been required to cut down, or we may have felt impelled to omit, the reports of many of the sermons recently delivered many of the sermons recently delivered before crowds of hearers at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, by the Rev. Mr. Sam Jones, the 'Georgia cracker,' who has been preaching for some time past in the tauernacle there. We are unwilling to permit such language as he often uses in his sermons to appear in the column of the Sam.

the columns of the Sun.
Some of our local contemporaries are less particular about their reports of the less particular about their reports of the Rev. Mr. Sam Jones's sermons, and print passages of them which, we should think, must have shocked any reverent think, must have shocked any reverent Christians who may have been among his hearers. The Press, for example, gives a report of the sermon which he preached last Sunday night in the presence of the 4,000 people who crowded he tabernacle of Prohibition Park. Much of the language or lings of this ser-mon was of the nature of buffoonery; more of it was scrubby and ruffianish, and more of it was scrubby and rufflanish, and some of it was blasphemous. We quote here but a single passage, and we must account for our doing so by saying that we have an especial purpose in view. The Rev. Mr. Jones said:

God takes His augur and bores right down through a fellow's head to his heart and into his pocket, which should spurt like an artesian well. He don't begin way down and bore up. If He did, what would He do with the dirt? He can't do much with a fool, though, and there are some pieces of hickory that the Lord could not make an axle helve out of to save his soul.

"Is not this shocking language for a preacher to use about the Supreme being? Could anything be conceived of more repugnant to a reverent mind? Is it not blasphemous?

"We will not quote any more of the Rev. Mr. Jones's sermon of last Sunday night.

All of the present tendencies are in the direction of greater stability in public life. The man who enters a Washington department through one of the lowest clerkships, after passing a competitive examination, can count upon keeping his place indefinitely if he continues efficient, with the prospect of promotion to higher grades from time to time. The man who aspires to a congressional career, if he once secures an election to the House from All of the present tendencies are in a congressional career, if he once secures an election to the House from a district controlled by his party, may in most of the States expect a series of re-elections as the reward of conspicu-ous merit, with the chance of some day changing his seat to the Senate chamber. The man who would leave a name as a judge may reasonably hove that, if be reaches the bench of an inferior court, he will not suddenly be turned adrift after a brief term, but that he will be advanced to a higher rank as vacancies occur, and so be able to spend all his active years in the employment which he would most enjoy. In short, the Republic seems to be steadily recovering from its strange delusion that public life is the one occupation in the world where experience is of no value, and where the best service is to be secured by the most frequent changes. advanced to a higher rank as vacancies the close there was nothing startling in them. The wheat market took another bound at the close and sold at the highest point of the day for December.

The leading interest on Change at the opening was in the corn inde. The talk of large holding of corn, which does come out on any advance yet made, has caused a more pronounced feeling about the September deal. This put the trade on their mettle at opening. The most general belief is that Mr. Hutchinson has a hand in holding the long corn off the market, and with the farmers holding the actual stuff back a squeeze would be very natural. They market was very active and string at the close and sold close to the top Oats, considerable strength was apparent, with prices a shade higher.

The provision market was only moderately active, without much business.
